ery one in Russia, officers, civilians and moujiks, knows why Russia has been compelled to surrender a large part of her territory. They know that they have good officers and that the fighting strength and spirit of the Russion troops are as high as at the beginning of the war.

"They know also that they have been forced to retreat or stand helpless before the murderous fire of German artillery while their own guns have had only a few rounds of ammunition that had to be sparingly used. Without understanding the peculiar methods of the purchasing commission whose business it is to supply them with ammunition, they at least realize that their government is at fault, that they have been sent into trenches impossible to defend and that tone of thousands of sult of the delay in the delivery of am-

"In my opinion, in this present awak ening of the army and the people to the criminal neglect and corruption of their officials, there are the germs of the most serious revolution Russia has ever known—a revolution supported by the army. This revolution will come as

It has not moved any one to talk of ultimate defeat or the possibility of Russia's undertaking peace negotiations with Germany. Russia's reaction is one of intense indignation at the government officials who have been responsible for her tragic shortage of ammunition.

Tragedy Felt at Front.

The full tragedy of this shortage has only been observed by the men at the front, who with empty gun caissons have helplessly faced the concentrated artillery attacks of the enemy, and have watched the assured progress of the German and Austrian trench builders under their very positions, without the possibility of stopping them. These solution will come as shells they had. Caissons laden with ammunition were rushed up at full speed to the batttery positions, unloaded and vainly spent. Continual rumors were heard that fresh ammunition was arriving. It was, but it was coming too slowly.

Two days before Warsaw was abandoned ammunition began to arrive in larger quantities, but the Russian forces, threatened with being complete-twing all Germans from the city was not enforced by the city authorities the mob decided to take the matter in its own hands and expel them forcibly by destroying their homes, business and property.

"Evidence of the same spirit of proianche of criticism and the accusations which have been made against the government officials who are held responsible. For once, expression of opinion in Russia has become free and unhampered.

No attempt is made to conceal this reproach against the methods of the bureaucrats who are accused of having crippled Russia's fighting strength

The school for colored children at Fairmont Heights, Md., was opened was enrolled by the principal, Miss N.

J. Wilkes of 2227 12th street northwest, this city. The school has grown from one room with seven pupils and one tracts that the business of buying war materials waited while the purchasing commissions adjusted satisfactorily the amount of commissions which they were to obtain. American and English business men who have been trying to sell ammuni-tion to the Russian government state server in Russia since the beginning of the war regards as the fundamental reason—a reason that has inflamed popular feeling to its present pitch of New Shells Too Large.

A short time before the fall of Warsaw it seemed that the situation had been greatly improved by the arrival of 2,000,000 shells. It was not until ome of these were taken to the actual firing line that it was discovered, acording to reports, that they were fraction of an inch too large to fit fraction of an inch too large to fit any Russian gun. By an odd coincidence, however, they were of the exact caliber to fit some of the German artillery.

Stories of this sort, which are widely circulated in Russia, have done nothing to soothe the agitated state of mind of the public.

It also is well known that a large amount of shrapnel was offered Russia by American manufacturers six sia by American manufacturers six months ago, but for some reason or other was not accepted. Since that time Russia has been forced to buy the ame shrapnel at almost double first price quoted.

Could Have Saved Positions.

It is the opinion of most military obervers that, with a full supply of ammunition, the Lublin-Chelm line and the Russian positions along the Vistula could have been effectively defended. Russian staff officers even go so far as to say that if the German advance could have been delayed a week longer sufficient ammunition would have arrived to turn the tide and save the Vistula line from Ger-and save the visitia line from Ger-man possession.

Officers who helped to conduct the retreat of the Russians from position to position—from one line of trenches, literally swept away by German fire, to another awaiting the same fate— describe vividly the tragedy of fighting with insufficient ammunition. German and materially delayed the ending of the war. It is not expressed alone by men of revolutionary inclinations or opposition tendencies, nor is it uttered in hushed voices or secret places, but is loudly and clamorously current everywhere among men of all parties and classes.

Statement of Duma Member.

A prominent man of the duma said to an American correspondent in Petrograd a few days ago:

The Duraine people are on the Officers Are Helpless.

Thus, the Russian officers recount, while they watched from their obser-vation trenches the cool, assured progress of the enemy, they could do nothing. An enforced idleness and utter helplessness lay on riflemen and gunners, for, in most of the batteries, the larger was subject to the latteries. the larger guns, which alone could have been instrumental in holding the Germans, were provided with only ten rounds of ammunition. Whenever there was a chance to fight, the Russian soldiers fought with great obstinacy, but in the majority of cases the tempest of the German artillery attack so far accomplished its aim that a charge was superfluous. Sometimes as many as sixteen German guns, concentrated upon one Russian position centrated upon one Russian position, tore up every sign of the Russian in-

When the Germans advanced upon trenches there was no opposition. In many cases not a single Russian soldier was alive. The Germans then prepared to take the next position, and the performance was repeated.

Expend Their Last Shells.

Meanwhile, the Russians were expending before retreat actually the last shells they had. Caissons laden with under their very positions, without the possibility of stopping them. These soldiers were determined, experienced fighters. Russia's best troops, acquitting themselves with unusual bravery in every bayonet action, but crippled and finally Gemoralized by insufficient ammunition and the knowledge that it was this lack of ammunition that ordered their continued retreat from one position to another.

The most rigidly censored press in the world and a national and inherent inhibition of free comment of any sort have failed to check the avaianche of criticism and the accusations which have been made against the government officials who superintend the purchase of war munitions were primarily interested in seizing the attempts of mands and experiment of them forcibly by destroying their themse sand property.

"Evidence of the same spirit of protest has appeared in a milder form in Petrograd, where numerous meetings it was openly declared that Russian officials were declared that Russian officials were declared that was openly declared that Russian officials were declared that was openly destroying the overnment of any substitution of the army to with the war and that while they continued in power victory was impossible."

See Chance for Fortune.

The allegation was made that the purchase of war of ammunition and that, impropetive erit equipped in this respect, Russia's garmy of one-half its potential size. Russia is at present exerting every effort to remove the obstacles to the quicker delivery of ammunition. The gra that, without an average payment of 10 per cent commission on all sales, it was impossible to do business with the lithium purchasing commissions. In some cases the contract, they say, is delayed, while the amount of commission is adjusted, and it is not an unusual thing for this delay to be a matter of months.

This is necessarily a simplified exposition of what has been delaying the Russian purchase of ammunition, but it contains what virtually every observer in Russia since the beginning With the largest entrance enrollmen
